

Respect Life Society – May 15, 2016

More from New Yorkers for Life about physician assisted suicide – It really is a slippery slope. – Once the government approves of assisted suicide for those with at 6 month terminal diagnosis, it will be difficult, if not impossible, to limit it to this group. Indeed, in Oregon, where assisted suicide is legal for this population, lawmakers are already considering extending the terminal diagnosis to those with one year or less to live.